La Costa Canyon High School students earn awards

Several La Costa Canyon High School students recently earned awards for their academic achievements, imagination and community service efforts.

Freshman Taylor Crabtree, top left, received an Angels in Action service award for her TayBear Company, which makes hair clips and sells them to buy teddy bears as presents for children with cancer and chronic blood diseases.

Her company has given away more than 20,000 teddy bears to pediatric hematology and oncology hospitals throughout the country.

Senior Panna Felsen, center, recently was selected as a semi-finalist in the 2004-05 Siemens Westinghouse Competition in Math, Science and Technology.

The competition recognizes remarkable talent early on, fostering individual growth for high school students who are willing to challenge themselves through science research. Through the competition, students have a chance to achieve national recognition for science research projects they complete in high school.

She presented her science fair project, 'Effects of Tumeric and Perchlorate on Dahpnia Heart Rate,' and gave a short science demonstration at the National Academies of Science in Washington, D.C.
